Banking Monthly Report (March 2025)

Loans and deposits: Bank lending to the private sector grew 15.0% y/y in March 2025 (+1.9% m/m), higher than last month's growth of 13.8% y/y. Meanwhile, retail real estate loans grew by 12.7% y/y in March (+1.2% m/m). Residential new monthly mortgage disbursements increased by 10.2% y/y to reach SAR8.4bn in March 2025 (-5.7% m/m). At 8.0% y/y (+0.3% m/m), the trend of deposits growing slower than loans continued. With regards to the deposit mix, the share of Time & Savings deposits stood at 38% in March, up from 37% in the previous month. Time and Savings deposits, and Government deposits (30% of total deposits) grew by 27.5% y/y and 2.4% y/y, respectively, while demand deposits were up by 3.9% y/y. LDR came in at 82.7% in March. The sector LDR remains elevated, indicating rising liquidity pressure in the system. Most banks are resorting to capital market instruments to fund their liquidity needs.

Banking sector profits: In March, the profit before tax for the banks increased 27.1% y/y, while it increased by 6.8% m/m, reaching SAR8.8bn. Meanwhile, the 1Q25 profit before tax for the banks stood at SAR25.2bn, up 21.5% y/y. The yield curve remains inverted, with Saudi 3M SAIBOR at ~5.4%, and the 10Y Govt Bond yield at ~4.9%, indicating economic strain.

Economic activity: PoS sales grew 10.3% y/y, while ATM withdrawals increased by 2.5% y/y in March. Saudi Arabia's non-oil private sector PMI declined to 58.1 in March, down from Jan's multi-year peak of 60.5, but still indicates strong growth in non-oil activities. In March, the US Fed kept its rate target at 4.25%-4.50% and maintained its expectation of two rate cuts in 2025. However, their updated economic forecasts point to weaker growth and increased inflation in 2025 due to recent tariffs and retaliations, raising recession concerns. The Fed will likely closely monitor global tariff uncertainties before adjusting its policy. The Bloomberg 2025 rate forecast edged down to 3.95%, from the previous estimate of 4.05%.
